FOUNDATION

Ambika - who started it all.
An angel who changed my life.
Wherever she is she will always be loved and missed.”

Lord Paul

The Ambika Paul Foundation is a charitable trust set up in memory of Lord Swraj Paul's daughter Ambika, who died of leukaemia in 1968, aged 4.

It was to further the treatment of her illness that Lord Paul first came to Britain in 1966. He remained in England after Ambika's tragic death, and went on to create Caparo, a widely diversified global association of businesses with interests across many markets, products and services.

The Foundation was created in 1978 and since then, funded by donations from the Paul family and the family-owned Caparo businesses, has grown to have substantial net assets and an impressive programme of donations.

The Foundation promotes the well-being of children and young people all over the world through education, culture and health, and seeks to encourage and inspire them to learn about the world they live in.

FOUNDATION
at the London Zoo

One of the first major beneficiaries from the Foundation's work was the Zoological Society of London. While in London receiving treatment, the Zoo became Ambika's favourite place to visit and in 1994, when it was threatened with closure, the Foundation donated a substantial amount to help the Society.

The donation was used to build a new Children's Zoo in her name. The Foundation has continued to support the Zoo on other projects since then, such as the Lady Paul Pygmy Hippo Enclosure, the African Aviary Bridge and Tiger Territory while further projects are planned.

University of Westminster

In the UK the Foundation has sponsored the redevelopment of the P3 exhibition space at the University of Westminster, which was opened by Mrs Sarah Brown, wife of the former UK Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. Gordon Brown MP, in June 2008. The Ambika P3 space is dedicated to innovation, experimentation and learning, with emphasis on the creative industries, enabling both students and professionals to exhibit their works.

The University of Wolverhampton

Faithful to its mission in helping young people to access education, over the years the Foundation has donated generously to the University of Wolverhampton, an institution it has forged close ties with.

In 2010, the Foundation provided support to establish the new Ambika Paul Student Union Centre at the University. Named after Ambika, the centre was completely refurbished and re-designed to meet the needs of the student population, and continues to provide a vibrant 21st century environment for students to meet, study and relax.

In 2015, a gift of £1million was presented to the University, which was used to further enhance the student experience. In honour of Lord Paul's daughter and her continuing legacy, the University unveiled the Ambika Paul Building in an official ceremony in 2015.

IT Study
Centre

John Leggott College, Scunthorpe

Thanks to the Ambika Paul Foundation, in the late 1990s sixth form students from John Leggott College were given open access to an advanced computer suite. With a reputation for being at the forefront of learning technology, the development of the Ambika Paul IT Study Centre at the College represented an exciting development in its aim to provide students with the best learning environments.

Since its introduction, the Centre has been continually updated and now houses more than 100 PCs, all with access to the Internet and a variety of e-resources to assist students with their learning outside the classroom.

Support was also provided to the Ambika Paul Technology Laboratory at Thomas Sumpter School, now merged with another local college and called Melior Community College.

The Carnegie Mellon University.

Promoting education is a priority for the Foundation, and over the years several large grants have been made. One example, which combines the furtherance of education with medical research into children's health, is the programme of donations to the Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh, of which a significant part is devoted to the Infant Lab Suite, where researchers are working to understand infant development to help children with disabilities such as autism and specific language impairment.

Jalandhar, India

The Ambika Paul School of Technology in Jalandhar was completed in 2007 as a gift to Jalandhar from Lord Paul.

The School is run by the Punjab Technical University and offers graduate and postgraduate degrees in Engineering.

Liberty Plaza

Chapman University, Orange County,
California, USA

Liberty Plaza at Chapman University, Orange County, California has a large section of the Berlin Wall on display, given to Chapman by the City of Berlin in 1998 and underwritten by the Foundation. The Wall is surrounded by gardens with a reflecting pool and seating and the Plaza was dedicated to the memory of Ambika Paul on 4 May 1999. Liberty Plaza is a dramatic reminder to current and future generations of students that freedom is precious and must be protected. Chapman University is one of a small and prestigious group of recipients of large pieces of the Berlin Wall, including the Vatican and CIA Headquarters in Virginia.

The Auditorium at Apeejay School of Management Dwarka, New Delhi, India

The Foundation sponsored the Auditorium at the Apeejay School of Management in Dwarka, New Delhi. The state-of-the-art air-conditioned auditorium seats 450 and hosts various academic activities such as conferences, seminars and symposia. The 350 stepped seating open-air theatre hosts cultural and extra-curricular activities.

Other major donations

Outside of the United Kingdom, the Ambika Paul Foundation has also assisted with funding the following organisations:

- Ambika Paul Scholarships, Forman Christian College, Lahore
- Bratek Charity, Poland
- Lord Paul Award, Indian School, Oman
- Namaso Relief Fund, New Orleans
- President of Pakistan Relief Fund, 2005
- Sri Lanka Relief Fund, 2004

On a smaller scale, many donations are also made each year to other UK and Indian organisations associated with children, health and welfare. Notably, significant sums have been given to disaster relief efforts, especially to India and Sri Lanka after the tsunami in the Indian Ocean, and to India and Pakistan after the 2005 earthquake.

Over the 30 years since its establishment, the Ambika Paul Foundation has grown to be a significant force for the promotion of the education and welfare of young people, and aims to be able to continue this work on an increasing scale.

Thus the short life of a little girl, who died tragically at the age of four in 1968, is proving to be an inspiration, and a great force for gentleness and good that spreads far and wide.
